4,500 TROOPS NOW IN GUARD CAMP

119TH FIELD ARTILLERY ARRIVE
WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Several Band Concerts Scheduled for Grayling.

About 4,500 Michigan National Guard officers and men are now in camp at Hanson State Military reservation and are undergoing the usual courses of military instructions.

The weather has been most excellent most of the time and the days just cool enough to enable the men to work hard without the hardship of hot weather. The morale of the camp is excellent and the training schedules are being pulled off as arranged.

A special feature of the camp this year is the march of the 119th Field artillery from Sterling to Grayling, a distance of 65 miles. They arrived in Sterling August 6th, beginning their march the next day. Sunday was spent in West Branch where they spent the day, thousands of people visiting the camp, including Gen. Wilson and his staff. They arrived in Grayling Wednesday evening, and were royally received. Col. Lewis, commanding the 119th expressed himself as more than pleased with the march and the men looked as if they had enjoyed their experiences. Only two minor accidents happened and practically no sickness. The regiment occupied about two miles of road while on the march and other highway traffic was interrupted for a few hours on this last section of the route. The 119th consists of 500 officers and men and 522 horses together with a complete artillery outfit.

Next Sunday, August 16th, will be a big day in camp. In the morning there will be Memorial service in front of Gen. Wilson's quarters on Division hill. In the afternoon there will be a review of all the troops of the camp, at the field near the cement mess hall. It is expected that Gov. Greason will be present that day.

The first contingent to leave camp will be the 182nd Field Artillery, they breaking camp for home Monday night. Others will leave at intervals up to Friday, August 22nd.

On Tuesday afternoon Gen. Wilson and his staff paid an official visit to the mayor of Grayling, R. D. Comins, who with a number of his councilmen, met at the Court house to receive the visitors. It was a cordial get-together meeting to discuss matters pertaining to the good of the camp and the village alike. The feeling between the people and officials of Grayling and the Guard has always been the best ever, and there is no reason why it should not continue indefinitely. There never has been the slightest friction or misunderstanding to arise between the people of the town and the camp. The latter means much to the people of Grayling and we cannot afford to be otherwise but friendly, and besides we have learned to know personally many of the men in camp until they are looked upon as old friends returning for their annual visits.

Band Concerts.

The following band concerts for Grayling are announced in the camp bulletin: On Tuesday evening, August 11, a concert was played in the Band stand by the 182nd F. A. regimental band. Tonight—Thursday, August 13, there will be a concert by the 126th Infantry regimental band; the 119th F. A. regimental band will play a concert Saturday night, August 15; on Monday evening, August 17th there will be a concert by the 125th Infantry regimental band; and on Thursday, August 20th, the downtown band concert program will be closed with a concert by the 107th Med. regimental band.

SPECIAL PREMIUM ANNOUNCED FOR TOP O' MICHIGAN POTATO SHOW.

A special class with $100 in cash prizes is to be fostered by the State Department of Agriculture at the Top O' Michigan Potato Show, according to Mr. A. C. Lytle, Secretary of the Show. To compete in this class, an exhibitor is required to furnish one bushel of field run potatoes, one half of which he must have graded according to the Michigan grading law, thus dividing this half-bushel into three lots—U. S. No. 1's, U. S. No. 2's, and culls. All three of these lots will be inspected by an expert on the enforcement of the grading law to see if any potatoes have been misplaced. Hence, the premium would be awarded strictly on the ability of the producer to interpret the Michigan grades. The first prize will be $50 in cash.

Remember to break your match before throwing it away. Broken matches won't start many fires.

OFFICERS FIND SMALL BREWERY

CAPTURE 60 GALLONS BEER AND SMASH 478 BOTTLES

Sheriff Bobenmoyer and his deputies last week transferred their activities to the southern part of the county and as a result, last Saturday arrested Edward Headsted and his wife, charging them with violation of the prohibition law, and confiscated 2½ cases of bottled beer and fifty gallons of beer ready to be bottled, and four quarts of whiskey, and for good measure, smashed 478 empty beer bottles. Headsted, it is reported, had made boasts of what he would do to the sheriff if he ever came around his place, but, it seems that that wasn't enough to frighten "Bob" any and he just went down there and took him and his wife to jail. They are bound over to the Circuit court for trial. Headsted is out on $1,000 bail and his wife on $500.

The sheriff's posse also discovered a still and three quarts of moonshine whiskey at the farm home of Tom Noland, also in South Branch township, and the latter is now charged with having in his possession and with selling intoxicating liquors. Sheriff Bobenmoyer states that at each of these places he and his men purchased liquor personally.

Looks like a pretty busy term of court in October.

TUBERCULOSIS TEST O. K.

In view of the fact that the cattle of Crawford County have been tested twice for tuberculosis, and will be tested again this fall, it may be interesting to our farmers to know that the United States Department of Agriculture issued a statement August 5, 1925, to the effect that, after examination of one million four hundred thousand (1,400,000) cattle, the test has been found to be ninety-nine and three-quarters (99.75) per cent correct; or, lacking only one-quarter of one per cent of being perfect.

E. H. Anderson, manager of the agricultural relations department of the New York Central lines, located at Rochester, N. Y. says regarding the East Michigan edition of "See America First": "This is certainly very finely gotten up and presents the advantages of East Michigan to the vacation hunter in very attractive and alluring terms.

A hick town is said to be a town where most of the natives still know the train schedules by heart.

MINE PARLEY MAY BE RESUMED SOON

Threatened "Coal Strike Expected to Be Averted—
Coolidge Optimistic.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Negotiations between operators and miners in the anthracite coal fields may be resumed and the suspension of work, now threatened for September 1, averted, according to reports prevalent here.

The optimistic outlook for settlement of the wage differences which have blocked writing of a new contract to supplant the one which expires on August 31 was based on intimations that the miners would adopt a more conciliatory tone. The way for a resumption of the parleys, which were broken off when Samuel D. Warner, chairman of the anthracite operators' committee, denied that the employers' representatives at the conference were "supernumeraries" was opened by Mr. Warner's second letter. Mr. Lewis' attitude reinforced the reports of a resumption of conferences. It was indicated that his answer would be fully as conciliatory as the peace overture of the operators' leader.

Swampscott, Mass.—President Coolidge believes that the anthracite coal negotiations broken off at Atlantic City will be resumed in the near future by the miners and operators. It was officially stated at White Court.

Vice President's Last Trout Biggest of Them All

Lincoln, Neb.—The last fish was the biggest of all, a beautiful dappled mountain trout, hooked on the final day of the stay at Wagon Wheel Gap, and it made the total catch of the nine days' vacation at the gap an even 100. Not bad for an amateur fisherman, eh?

This was the triumphant report made by Vice President Charles G. Dawes on his arrival in Lincoln.

Other members of the party declared the vice president's recital of his fishing exploits was modest.

Likes Lake Margrethe

By L. C. Bundgaard.

There is a certain spot in Michigan that I love to think of when the camping season comes around. They call it Portage Lake, when I first saw it; but in honor of the donor's wife of the Hanson State Military reservation located there, the State has named "Lake Margrethe."

From Chicago we take the Michigan Central, to the little town of Grayling, 100 miles north of Bay City, with a population of about 3,000 people. Here is the center for fishing and canoe parties, along the historic AuSable river, one of the most famous trout streams in America; and as tempting as it may be to launch our canoe here and float through a hundred mile long forest till we reach Lake Huron, we cannot linger here long, but hasten to find an auto to drive us the three miles to Lake Margrethe.

The stone road leading to the lake takes us through a thick forest of underbrush, and young trees of pine, oak and maple. We get an impression of what Michigan's forests were before the forest fires and the lumber industry.

There is a sudden opening in the woods and before we realize it we see the clear waters of Lake Margrethe. It is not one of the largest lakes in Michigan, only about 10 miles around it, but it surely is one of the most beautiful and one of the least disturbed places for a summer vacation.

The lake lies hidden between hills and forests, and the nearest sign of civilization, being a nearby farm, is three miles away. There is plenty of activity here in the summer time.

On a plateau looking over the east and southern angles of the lake, we find during a part of July the tents of the Michigan National Guard. Of permanent buildings there is a hospital, administration building, superintendent's residence, several barns, mess houses, store houses, and a beautiful club house for the officers.

On the southeast side are many cottages serving as summer homes for many people of the town three miles away, and for people from Chicago and other points of the mid-west.

On the north side of the lake are fewer cottages because it was impossible, until a few years ago to drive to this part, but here is really the place that is least spoiled by civilization, and we chose to pitch our tent here, or if we are lucky to have friends here, we may rent a cottage at a reasonable rate. Here there is plenty of sunlight and plenty of shade, the best beach and shallow water for over two hundred feet out, and it is the only place that gives us a full view of the rectangular shaped lake.

Lake Margrethe is full of green bass, black bass, perch and pike, and the best fishing spot is near our camp. It is also an easy matter to pick plenty of huckleberries, blackberries and wild strawberries in the woods to supply a delicious dessert for every meal.

Supper is over and we are sitting on the banks watching the sun linger over the pines on the west side of the lake. Shadows from the "point" on the opposite shore seem to be creeping nearer; a flood of lights is turned on over at the Military reservation camp; we hear the sounding of "taps." A whippoorwill sounds its challenge near us; the mystic rays of the northern lights seem to flicker thru the darkness of the pines, and as the night gets cooler and the silence grows more tense we begin to feel the soothing effect of nature; we hear voices that are old friends but nearly forgotten; we renew our acquaintance with that part of ourselves that has been lost in the hustle and bustle of city life.

As we slip into our beds my partner says: "Ah, this surely is a rendezvous with life." I agree with him—the day tomorrow is a new day.

For Legions' Orphan Fund

Sponsoring the effort to establish a $5,000,000 American Legion endowment fund for disabled veterans and orphans, the work of raising Michigan's share now being under way, Secretary of Agriculture W. M. Jardine today accepted membership on the national honorary committee of the fund.

In a letter to National Commander James A. Drain, the Secretary of Agriculture says:

"I am happy to accept your invitation to membership on the National Honorary Committee of the American Legion Endowment Fund. No one can fail to value highly the sound, practical steps which The American Legion has taken in establishing this fund. It should appeal to Americans everywhere as a practical demonstration of patriotic zeal applied to a great educational purpose. Your program is logical, progressive and humane. I feel confident that it will receive the wholehearted support of the public."

The other members of the president's cabinet have accepted places on the national honorary committee, of which President Coolidge is chairman, and associated with them are the highest officers of the army, navy and marine corps, besides the leading figures every walk in life.

FRENCH FIND FOE IN ANCIENT FORT

Stronghold Used by Rifas as Base for Raids.

Fes, French Morocco.—A gigantic fortress from which the minions of Abdel-Krim, rebel chieftain, issue forth to murder and lay waste hostile villages has been discovered by French troops.

This stronghold is midway between Fes and Ouezzan. It is approximately 800 feet high and the walls are extremely thick and in a wonderful state of preservation. The interior is about 300x600 feet. The fortification has sheltered as many as 800 Rifian warriors, who organize there for raids.

It was built in the Seventeenth century by the Portuguese when that nation was a power in North Africa. Small artillery would be useless against it and to take it by assault would prove a costly operation.

The French army threw a squadron of tanks into the battle area in the north and northwest sections and in the Asejen range completely routed the Rifian enemy from a strongly fortified position.

At Asejen the enemy were completely taken aback by the sight of the tanks and after a brief resistance fled, leaving sixty of their dead upon the ground.

Several planes are reported to be operating from the Rifian bases, which makes good the threat of Abdel-Krim that he would soon be in possession of aircraft.

MINERS PREPARE TO STRIKE SEPT. 1

Operators Refuse to Concede Wage Raise—Workers Won't Arbitrate.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Authority to call out 158,000 anthracite miners if no agreement with the operators is reached by midnight, August 31, was vested in the subcommittee which failed to negotiate an agreement with the operators at sessions terminating here.

The action was taken by the full scale committee, composed of 40 members.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Refusal of the anthracite operators to concede a wage increase and the check-off caused the coal miners to break off negotiations for a new contract.

This action was taken in advance of the operators' submission of their formal reply to the demands of the miners, who had not quite finished presenting their case.

With federal intervention, as reported from Swampscott, out of the question until after the present agreement expires on September 1, and with a reluctance on both sides to submit their case to Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania, a strike of 158,000 anthracite mine workers appears certain.

Persistent rumors here link a walk-out in the bituminous fields to be timed simultaneously with the expected anthracite strike on September 1. Basis of the break in negotiations over the anthracite scale, which began on July 9, was the demand by President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers, on July 31, that Samuel D. Warriner, president of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation company, and W. B. Richards, president of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal company, take part in the conferences. Lewis alleged that the operators' subcommittee is composed of minor heads and that it was without power.

The operators asked two questions, the first was whether, in view of the operators' opposition to a wage increase and the check-off, the miners refused to continue negotiations. This evoked an affirmative reply.

The second question was a request to submit matters in dispute to arbitration. In reply the miners pointed to Mr. Lewis' letter, alleging that in a previous arbitration the mine workers lost $60,000,000 in the two years to acquire the knowledge that they now possess concerning the anthracite operators' well-known policy of "keeping close to an arbitrator."

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white squares this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

JOHN

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK

WHEN I count up the everyday heroes whom I have known—those simple unselfish souls who meet the sorrows and the sacrifices of a life of toil uncomplainingly and well—I always think of John.

He was, indeed, a very unheroic figure. He was round shouldered and thin, almost to emaciation, and his ill-fitting, ill-kept clothes hung loosely on him and served to accentuate his physical defects.

He had never had any real home so far as I know. He had "boarded" for thirty years with Mrs. Baynes, a worthy woman who did the village dressmaking and thereby supported an incapable husband. John had taken care of her little garden, had looked after the few chores about the place, had kept the premises and the house in repair. He seemed more a guest than otherwise, though he occupied a bare little room at the back of the house and paid his modest weekly board bill with regularity.

He did not always follow a regular business. In early life he had been a farmhand; later he apprenticed himself to a barber, and in recent years he had kept an untidy barber shop at the edge of town, but trade was pretty slack excepting Saturdays. Frugal wives beat him out of his earnings by trimming the hair of their husbands and children; the work was sometimes crudely done, but a penny saved is two pence earned, and there was no evidence of an inflated currency in the village. He could adapt himself to various sorts of work. He was a host in himself at the time of spring house cleaning, wielding the paint brush skillfully within and without the house, putting on wall paper and acting as general carpenter and repair man. Sometimes in the summer, utilizing his early training, he went out into the farming district and lent his hand at haying and grain harvest and threshing.

He was full of sympathy, and ready to sacrifice his own desires and interests for the good of others. He had a ready wit, a keen insight into the characters of men, a strangely simple accurate judgment. He had no knowledge of literature, he was not much given to religion, he was quite ignorant of political science, and yet the village teacher always dropped in to see John when he struck a hard snag; the minister would never have got quite successfully through a revival service without consulting him, and there was never a political scheme in the county carried through without his being on the inside.

He was a good story teller—direct, humorous, individual. I've seen a crowd about him of ten at a village street corner or when the men were resting at noon in harvest time, every ear strained to catch his words, and every man shouting with laughter at his tales.

He knew everyone within twenty miles, any everyone whom he knew had a good word for him. Children told him their troubles, mothers named their babies for him; men out of luck and out of work came to him for help, and young boys asked his advice and took it. "No one was too low or too insignificant for his consideration. No help that he ever gave was offered with the idea of reward, yet he was seldom left out of any social gathering in the town or the community. He said himself once that he thought he had ridden more miles in a motor car than anyone living, and he did not himself own a car or drive one.

If anyone was sick he sent for John. If anyone was in trouble it was John to whom he came for advice—young girls and old women, wild boys and shrewd men, the child and the gray beard found in him an unselfish friend and a helpful adviser. No one ever heard him complain or grumble or find fault at his humble lot.

MY FAVORITE STORIES

By IRVIN S. COBB

Practically Destitute in Fact

Some of my dearest boyhood memories cluster about a gravel-covered wharf where the Tennessee like an amorous lady, kisses the Ohio not once but twice and then in the embrace of the wider, stronger stream goes romancing away to receive the parental blessing of that father of all the rivers, the Old Mississippi. There on the porch of an ancient boatstore overlooking the mating-place of the waters I heard tales of the older days when the gamblers rode the packets and the mate knew no closed season on black roustabouts and the b'fers busted from time to time and scattered proud steamboats in splintery smithereens. There too, I one day heard what I still, after all these years, regard as a magnificent example of spontaneous American humor.

Tilted back in his chair on the boatstore porch sat Cap'n Joe Fowler, as typical a Kentuckian as the fag end of the last century produced. A packet bound from Cincinnati to New Orleans, landed. Up the steep slope of the wharf came a tourist lady from up North somewhere—anywhere across the Ohio was "up North" to us in that town. In the crook of her arm this lady bore the first Mexican hairless dog Cap'n Joe had ever seen. The animal was no larger than a full grown rat; in fact it rather resembled a rat. It seemed a miserable, naked, sickly little thing which shivered even though the air was balmy and flinched with vague uneasiness at every sound.

As the lady drew close Cap'n Joe stood up and made a low bow to her. "If beg your pardon, madam," he said in his best company drawl, "but might a total stranger so far intrude upon you as to ask you a question?" "You might," she said, her sharp accents in strong contrast to his deeper yet infinitely softer tones: "Thank you, madam," he said. "The question, madam, relates to the dog you are carrying. Is that your own dog?"

"It is," she said. "Is that the only dog you've got?" "It is."

"Madam," said Cap'n Joe, "ain't you mighty nigh out of dog?"

Where Jimmy's Education Really Was Shy

After a twenty years' absence a gentleman returned to the little New England town where he had been born and where he spent his boyhood. In the neighborhood in which he had been reared he found but one of the original residents remaining, an elderly Irish lady. He made himself known to her, and she welcomed him back home again, and promptly they fell to talking of the boys and girls with whom he had grown up. This one, she told him, had turned out badly. That one had turned out well. Some were dead. Some had moved away. Finally he asked:

"Tell me, Mrs. Daly, whatever became of poor little Jimmy McKenna who used to live in the shanty right down the street here?"

"Poor, is it?" echoed Mrs. Daly. "Poor nothin'! Jimmy McKenna had no schoolin', as you may remember, but when he grew up he got into the truckin' business and from that he turned to contractin' and though he couldn't read and write, he made a million."

"Bully!" said the returned one. "And where is he now?"

"As to that," said Mrs. Daly, "I couldn't say. I hope, though, he's in heaven. You see, some two years ago, Jimmy went down to the gravel pit where some of the byes was in swimmin', and it bein' a warm day he took off his clothes and waded in, and he waded out too far and he got over his head and was drowned."

"Oh, that's too bad," said the visitor. "To think of a boy who had no better start than Jim McKenna had doing so well in the world, and then meeting an end like that! And he made a million, you say? And yet he couldn't read and write."

"No," said Mrs. Daly, "nor swim."

Not a Family of Musicians

A self-made western millionaire built the finest house in his home town. He imported decorators to furnish it, and managed to get it finished by the time his eldest son arrived from the East where the youth had been completing his education.

The proud father escorted the young man through the shining new mansion, followed by the other members of the household. When the grand tour had been completed the millionaire inquired whether the son had any suggestions to make.

"Well," said the young man, "to me it seems complete in every possible detail except one."

"What's missin'?" demanded the parent.

"You ought to have a chandelier in the main drawing-room," said the boy.

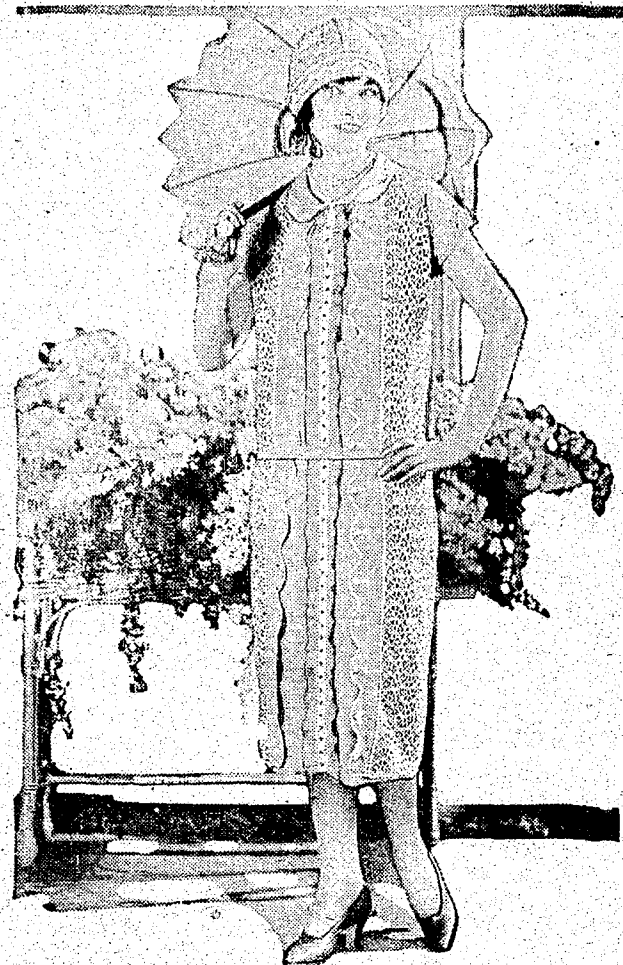

"All right," said the father. "I'll order one by telegraph tonight but I'll bet a thousand dollars there ain't a d—n one in the family can play it."

STYLES FOR LATE SUMMER; SHEER, COLORFUL LINGERIE

WHEN August comes leading in the burning sun of late summer, women demand clothes that are cool and comfortable—and that look all of that. In fact, they insist more upon a cool appearance than upon actual cool quality in their apparel, as witness those small, white felt or white kid hats that are popular. Felt hats are not cool, but they are soft and comfortable and light ones look cool—high combination of good points has yielded success for them.

Plain linen is a time-honored fabric at has maintained its place because and it is evident that in their sunny minds there is no connection whatever between cold weather and underthings. The responsibility of keeping the female world warm in cold weather is blithely switched over to outer garments—let sweaters, frocks, coats and heating apparatus do it, appears to be their motto. The several types of undergarments, except for athletics, concern themselves with beauty of color, daintiness of fabric, easy adjustment to the figure and a general prettiness—which last item seems to be most important of all.

Cool Comfort Is Keynote of This Costume.

It looks cool in summer frocks, and because it launders perfectly. But open-work linen looks cool and is cool and a frock of it is presented herewith, as an ideal garment for the hottest weather. The picture shows it to be simple in design, bordered with scalloped pieces of plain linen down the front, each scallop serving to carry a pearl button and simulated buttonhole. A front panel of crepe de chine has a neck-to-hem plaiting at each side of a strip of plain linen down the front, adorned also with small pearl buttons. Plain and openwork linen in any light color, with white linen in blindings and

For making this irresponsible but fascinating underwear, light or sheer silk and cotton fabrics are demanded and the call for colored voiles has increased. The limit of delicacy is reached in georgette crepe or chiffon and new garments made of it are shown with one color posed over another—that is, they are double. Voile is not so nearly transparent, and two colors are managed in it by using one for voiles and borders hemstitched to the body of the garment in another color; pastel shades are used and a tailored finish. But crepe de chine and nylon crepe take precedence in this

Accessories, will develop this frock successfully.

The small hat of silk with sectional crown and narrow turned-up brim, is of the cool, posable kind that can be folded or flattened, to put in a suitcase. The last chapter in millinery's summer story deals with the career of this bit of practical and beautiful headwear, which is so accommodating and becoming. It is as light and cool as it is pretty. As to the footwear that supports this hot weather costume, it plays its important role perfectly—white silk stockings, light brown or gray kid pumps—nothing could be more cool and comfortable.

Designers and makers of lingerie are presenting their new fall lines of most women over other late fashions and new rivals of these old favorites find it hard to dislodge them. The faces most used for trimming are flat, alencon and val, with embroidered net and net footings in their company.

The picture given here shows a pajama set made of flesh-colored crepe de chine and trimmed with frills of cream-colored val lace. A narrow ribbon bonnet and little chiffon rosebud at the neck finish it. It has the popular slip-on jacket and is a model that may be developed in radium silk, sette, wash satin, checked nainsook or cotton crepes.

PROUD BY MR. BEETLE

"It's a matter of pride to me," said Mr. Beetle.

"Yes, it is a matter of great pride to me. Anyone in my position would be proud, too."

"I am in your position," said the Red-Winged Locust, "and I don't know that I am feeling particularly proud. I am crawling slowly about my cage here in the zoo as you are doing. Is that a position of which to be proud?"

"My dear Red-Winged," said the Beetle, "you are slow. You don't understand."

"Pardon me, my dear sir," said the Red-Winged Locust, "but you are thinking of my distant relatives, the snails."

"That is, they are not my near relatives, and I am not really sure that they are relatives at all."

"In fact, come to think of it, I don't believe they are relatives at all."

"My dear Mr. Red-Winged Locust," said Mr. Beetle, "why don't you think before you speak?"

"That's an old, old saying, older than you are or than I am."

"It's older than most creatures, I believe."

"But it's a good old saying, just the same."

"Well," admitted Mr. Red-Winged Locust, slowly, "I suppose I should have thought before I spoke."

"But the snails, I suppose, do belong to the insect class, and so do I, and so do you, so there must be some sort of a family relationship."

FRESHENING BREEZES

The first of September used to be portrayed as a young lady standing in a shady pool. Now it's the time when the coal miners quit digging for coal and start digging for more gold.

A woman says war can be talked to death. Probably goes on the theory that as soon as one of the fair sex starts to argue the most of us guys come in and surrender.

What has become of the old-fashioned keeper of the tavern who used to reckon that about twenty-five cents would be enough to pay for your dinner?

A southern Michigan man is said to have had the last word with his wife. He yelled "good night" just as she started the kitchen fire with a can of gasoline.

Instead of standing around wondering what has happened to the industrial situation why not try rolling up your sleeves for a while.

Economy can be said to be a national trait when we are able to ask for something a little cheaper and not have it charged.

The controversy down in Tennessee is said to have started in a drug store. Up here in Michigan we don't start any arguments in a drug store—we know the druggist will say "no" anyway.

And Now in Closing—

Remember that the wheels of industry are not the ones that are under the family flyover parked out in the back yard. It is just as necessary to shovel a little coal now to keep industry humming as it was in the old days when the full dinner pail made us the proudest nation on earth.

LOVELLS NEWS.

While fishing at Crapo lake Ray Duby and his uncle, Joe Duby, caught a snapping turtle weighing 36 pounds. It had the initials G. L. carved on its back and the year 1900. It isn't a fish story either.

Edgar Caid and John Roe went for a trip north.

A few of the Lovells folks motored to West Branch Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Nephew and Mrs. Duby made a trip to Gaylord Sunday.

N. C. Cotsbush of Lakeview, Ohio, spent a few days at Lovells.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Marratt and son Billy are occupying the Papenfus cottage.

Don't forget the dance at Lovells Thursday night.

Alfred Hanna has returned home after serving a year with the Coast guards.

Clara Melroy and family are visiting Mrs. G. Hanna.

R. Caid and family had quite a fright when their house caught afire. A few things were destroyed but we are pleased that no more damage was done.

WHAT THEY SAY ABOUT EAST MICHIGAN.

"I am enthusiastic about California, but I must admit your Michigan weather is wonderful."—W. Harold Kingley, California publisher.

"That the East Michigan Tourist association is accomplishing a lot for this section is manifest in the number of tourists that have been seen this year. That the organization is attracting attention through the work it is doing is evidenced in the comments which are made by the residents of this section."—Sheriff McKenna, Ogemaw county.

Apples Oddly Colored

Apple trees planted near a perpendicular rock cliff at Cashmere, Wash., produced apples that were colored on one side only because the sun and light could not reach the side next to the cliff. The location was chosen so that the roots might find perpetual moisture at the foot of the cliff.

Meaning of Great Statue

The Saint Gaudens statue in Rock Creek cemetery is correctly called the "Adams Memorial." Saint Gaudens had no intention of symbolizing "grief" in designing the figure. He said that to him it represented the soul face to face with the greatest of life's questions—"If a man die shall he live again?"

Liszt Knew Fame Early

Franz Liszt was a pianist of note before he was in his teens.

The two English-speaking nations have a good deal in common. They are both loyal to King Shakespeare. For example, they also spend the greater part of their leisure time in doing something somehow to some kind of a ball rather than looking at Shakespearean revivals.—London Morning Post.

IF L'ENFANT COULD RETURN—

WASHINGTON, ABOUT 1800

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN
 OULD L'Enfant return? could he revisit this earth after a hundred years—often one feels that Clotho, Lachesis and Atropos owe it to some men to let them leave for a brief moment "that bourn whence no traveler returns" to see the outcome of their work on earth.

And if Maj. Pierre Charles L'Enfant, artist, engineer, architect, soldier of the American Revolution and intimate of Washington and Lafayette could revisit us, no such return would seem to have more dramatic possibilities. For it was this brilliant and temperamental Frenchman who planned the capital city of the United States of America, apparently destined to be the most beautiful city of earth. Yet he died broken, discredited and emigrated, believing his great work doomed to certain failure. For generations his remains lay in an unmarked and unknown grave. Indeed half a stick of nonpareil will contain his whole career as commonly set forth in an encyclopedia.

L'Enfant, Charles Pierre—Born in Paris in 1755; studied engineering, architecture and art and was a lieutenant in French army; 1777, came with Lafayette and entered colonial army; 1778, promoted to captaincy of engineers; 1779, wounded at Savannah; May, 1780, taken prisoner at Charleston and exchanged in November; assigned to engineering on General Washington's staff; 1783, commissioned brevet major; designed badge of the Society of the Cincinnati; laid out Washington; dedicated of treaty which engineering at West Point; died June 14, 1825.

So runs the brief notation. Let us read between the lines.

General Washington noted the young Frenchman's efficiency, had him commissioned major of engineers and took him into his official family. Washington as President used him on government work in New York and Philadelphia. When Congress in July of 1790 passed an act establishing the "permanent seat of government of the United States" and turning over direction of the job to the President, L'Enfant wrote Washington, saying in part:

"The late determination of Congress to lay the foundation of a city which is to become the capital of this vast empire offers so great an occasion of acquiring reputation to whomever may be appointed to conduct the execution of the business that your excellency will not be surprised that my ambition and the desire I have of becoming a useful citizen should lead me to wish to share in the undertaking. The plan should be drawn on such a scale as to leave room for the enlargement and embellishment which the increase of the wealth of the nation will permit it to pursue at any period, however remote."

President Washington, under the act, appointed three commissioners:

Gen. Thomas Johnson and Daniel Carroll of Maryland and Dr. David Stuart of Virginia. September 8, 1791, these commissioners, with Thomas Jefferson, secretary of state, and James Madison, met and named the territory "Columbia" and the city "Washington." They also approved L'Enfant's plan. But when the commissioners asked for the final draft that they might have it engraved and published L'Enfant made emphatic refusal on the ground that speculators would use it to purchase the best locations in his "vistas and architectural squares" and raise hundreds of shanties which would permanently disgrace the city.

The commissioners had no means of raising money except by the sale of lots. They carried the situation to President Washington. So before long Secretary Jefferson wrote to Major L'Enfant that the President, "having received necessary evidence" of his refusal to accept or obey orders issued by the commissioners of the federal territory, had instructed him to say, "your services are at an end." L'Enfant hastened to see Washington, but found the President's decision final.

Now the real George Washington had considerable temperance of his own, the popular conception of his character to the contrary notwithstanding. He was dominant and impatient by nature and had a fierce temper. But he had himself under perfect control. An illuminating paragraph concerning Washington's attitude toward the "artistic temperament" is found in his letter to the commissioners of November 20, 1791:

"Men who possess talents which are for peculiar purposes are almost invariably under the influence of an toward disposition, or a selfish pride, or possessed of some other disqualification by which they plague all those with whom they are concerned; but I did not expect to meet with such perverseness in Major L'Enfant as his late conduct exhibited."

L'Enfant never did hand over his completed plan. He kept it hidden till the day of his death. L'Enfant's discharge became effective March 1, 1792. The President appointed Andrew Ellicott in his place. Ellicott produced a plan in close imitation of L'Enfant's. It was published and widely circulated. The commissioners went on with their work.

President Washington directed the commissioners to recompense L'Enfant for his work. The commissioners deposited to his credit 500 British guineas (more than $2,500) and notified him that they had decided him a lot "near the president's house." He indignantly declined both money and lot. He conceived himself mistreated—sacrificed to the greed of speculators. He saw the fading of his dream of a beautiful city.

The Truth
 To believe your own thought, to believe that which is true for you in your private heart is true for all men—that is genius. Speak your latent conviction, and it shall be the universal sense; for the inmost in due time becomes the outmost, and our first thought is rendered back to us by the trumpets of the Last Judgment.—Emerson.

Happiness seldom comes to those who seek it on the run.

L'Enfant returned to Philadelphia and did some architectural work. In the War of 1812 he was appointed to construct Fort Washington on the Potomac. After this L'Enfant lived chiefly with his friend Dudley Digges, Esq., at his fine mansion house, Chellum Castle, near Bladensburg. He haunted the halls of Congress, importing representatives and senators for "adequate compensation for his services."

As to his success with Congress there are several stories. One is that Congress never gave him a cent. Another is that in 1800 he filed a claim for $95,000 and was finally granted $2,500, which was seized by a creditor. A third is that in addition to the grant of $2,500 he was in 1810 given $866.66, with interest from March 1, 1792.

L'Enfant died at the age of seventy. Apparently he had no relatives. It is said there is no authentic portrait of him in existence. Certainly his death caused no public concern. He was buried under a cedar tree at Chellum Castle. And for just 84 years his unmarked grave was left to the care of nature.

Along about 1800 Washington had another "renaissance" under congressional auspices. Somebody hunted up the original L'Enfant plan—and lo! it was by far the best. So Congress, as far as possible, unscrambled the scrambled L'Enfant eggs and went back to his plan. It was also decided to make public recognition of L'Enfant's genius and services.

L'Enfant's remains, located after long search, were taken April 28, 1909, to the rotunda of the capitol at Washington. There they lay in state, as have the remains of presidents who have died in office and those of the "Unknown Soldier." President Taft and Jules Jusserand, the French ambassador, headed the dignitaries who attended the services. The funeral cortege made its way up Pennsylvania avenue and on to Arlington, the national cemetery. Internment was made on a prominent knoll in front of the Washington-Lee mansion. In 1911 was dedicated the memorial herewith shown.

Today new plans have been made for the beautification of Washington. A magnificent memorial bridge, typifying the complete union of the North and South, will cross the Potomac. An ornate highway will lead from the capitol, by way of the Lincoln Memorial and past the L'Enfant memorial, to the amphitheater in Arlington. So if Maj. Pierre Charles L'Enfant about the year 1935 could roll away the memorial above him and from his vantage point near the "Unknown Soldier" look out upon the magnificent vista ending in the permanent seat of government he planned for the United States of America—

Hub Hurler Worked Overtime Last Year

Howard Ehmke, of the Boston Red Sox, was the hardest worked pitcher in the league last season, pitching a total of 316 innings. He stood eighth in effectiveness and ranked well up for control. He took part in 45 games all told and pitched 26 complete games.

The honor of pitching the most games from start to finish went to Hollis Thurston, who was in 28 complete games and who ranked next to Ehmke in number of innings pitched in the season. Pennock was in 25 complete games. Johnson was in but 20.

the two departed, Sloan handed Dwyer 2,000 pounds (about $10,000) and said to him:

"Bet this on my mount in the fourth race—all of it on the nose. I'm going to bring him home in front."

Dwyer, who placed most of Sloan's bets during the time, said "all right" and then hustled off to his hotel.

Sloan rode his mount to victory in the fourth, just as he had predicted. The horse, an outsider, paid $12 to $1 and Sloan figured he had won $120,000.

After the races Sloan looked around for Dwyer. He couldn't find him. Finally he telephoned Dwyer's room. A sleepy voice answered. It was Dwyer's. He had slept all through the day and, therefore, had not placed the bet.

That Was the Life of Mrs. Hollister Until She Began Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Wyandotte, Michigan. "After my baby was born I didn't do my own work for six months and could hardly take care of my own baby. I always had a pain in my right side and it was so bad I was getting round shoulders. I would feel well one day and then feel so bad for three or four days that I would be in bed. One Sunday my mother came to see how I was, and she said a friend told her to tell me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So the next day I got a bottle and before it was half taken I got relief. After I was well again I went to the doctor and he asked me how I was getting along. I told him I was taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and he said it did not hurt any one to take it. I am always recommending the Vegetable Compound to others and I always have a bottle of it on hand."—Mrs. HENRY HOLLISTER, R. F. D. No. 1, Box 7, Wyandotte, Mich.

The American Legion

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

JAMES F. BARTON IS NATIONAL ADJUTANT

James F. Barton, formerly assistant national adjutant of the American Legion and prior to that for several years adjutant of the Iowa department, is now national adjutant. He succeeded Russell Creviston of Indiana, who retired at the end of July after a connection of six years with the national organization to become field director for the War Mothers' Memorial association at Washington.

The new adjutant has been active in the Legion ever since its formation. He was chosen commander of Fort Dodge post 130, Fort Dodge, Iowa, before the first national convention at Minneapolis in 1919. He became adjutant of the Iowa department in the fall of 1920. Prominent members of the Legion in Iowa say that a large part of the credit for making and keeping the Iowa department one of the best in the Legion belongs to Jim Barton.

Ten days after war was declared in 1917, Barton entered the service. In a month he was promoted to captain. He saw service overseas for 14 months. He was discharged at Camp Dodge, Iowa, August 8, 1919. He was a star athlete at the University of Iowa, where he captained the basketball team in his senior year. He took a law course there.

Mr. Creviston, immediately following his relinquishment of the duties of national adjutant, went to Rome, Italy, as secretary of the American Legion delegation to the Rome congress of 1924. For that purpose he was granted a special leave of absence from his work as field director with the War Mothers' Memorial association, which is seeking to erect a great memorial in honor of the mothers of the men and women who served in all the wars in which the country has taken part.

Resolutions of appreciation of Mr. Creviston's services with the Legion, together with a watch and a past national adjutant's badge as tokens of personal esteem, were presented to him on behalf of the national executive committee. The resolutions, drawn by a committee composed of Past National Commander Henry D. Lindsey, Past National Commander Hamford MacNider and Donald Strachan, recited Mr. Creviston's long and able services to the national organization and the vision and understanding which he brought to his duties.

Mr. Creviston, whose home is at Marion, Ind., helped to plan the first national convention of the Legion at Minneapolis. He became assistant national adjutant in 1920 and was promoted to the national adjutancy in February, 1924, following the resignation of Lemuel Bolles. He is a graduate of Indiana university.

Good Shooting

The Stars and Stripes must never touch the ground. E. P. Robertson was taught that when he was serving his nation in olive drab in far-off France. He remembered it recently while he was wearing the blue of a uniform policeman at Atlanta, Ga.

Walking his beat, Robertson saw a party of joy riders, trailing from their car was an American flag. It was being dragged through the dust and dirt and filth of the street.

Robertson's marksmanship record in the army is not known, but examination revealed that, although he fired but four shots to stop the desecrators of the flag, his sense of sight and balance was good; the rear tires of the feeling automobile were each neatly bored twice by the former doughboy's fire.

Restoration Camp

"Camp American Legion," new restoration camp for veterans established through the instrumentality of the Legion department of Wisconsin, was dedicated at Tomahawk lake recently before an audience of 1,500 persons.

"Since the close of the war," said a Legion official, "hundreds of men have been discharged from hospitals with the advice from the staff physicians to get out into the open. The advice was not taken because the average former service man has no money to spend upon a vacation. As a result they went back to their old jobs and within a matter of months were back at the hospital with broken health again. This big summer camp at Tomahawk lake will provide the needed environment for large number of convalescent veterans."

SUMS SPENT FOR HIGHWAY TRAVEL

Much Money Spent for New Motor Vehicles and for Their Upkeep.

In most people's minds the amount of money spent for highway travel in a state is usually thought of only as the money invested in highway improvement. Yet that item in a state's transportation bill is always the smallest in comparison to the sums spent for new motor vehicles and for their operation and upkeep.

Of Value to Car Owner.

An interesting tabulation published in the South Carolina Highway Bulletin for January, 1925, sheds some light on this matter which is of value to the motor car owner.

During the year 1924 there was expended in South Carolina approximately:

For new motor vehicles... $25,000,000
For gasoline... 16,000,000
For oil, tires, repairs and upkeep of motor vehicles... 21,000,000

This makes a total outlay in 1924 for motor vehicle operation of $62,000,000. Also there has been expended some $7,000,000 for road construction and maintenance, which is as much a part of motor vehicle operation as is the buying of oil or gasoline. The sums used for road purposes were furnished in part from gasoline taxes and motor vehicle license fees. In addition to these there have been expended about $2,000,000 in the improvement of city streets. Altogether, including miscellaneous and depreciation not covered by replacements, the total bill for highway transport in South Carolina for 1924 was approximately $75,000,000.

Equal Value of Crops.

This one item alone is equal to about one-half the value of all the crops produced in the state during the same year and it constitutes a very large proportion of the total budget for living expenses. The portion actually spent for highway improvement is only 12 per cent of the total transportation bill, yet it is in the building of better highways that lasting and definite economies are made in the largest item in the bill—the cost of operating and maintaining the motor vehicles.

Sudden Application of Brakes Is Bad Practice

The sudden application of automobile brakes and the consequent sliding of the wheels cause those worn spots on the tread of the tires which result in their being discarded long before they are really worn out. If the brakes are applied firmly but gently the car will be stopped as quickly, but without the disastrous results on the rear wheels which comes from jamming on the brakes. It would prevent the locking of the rear wheels, which causes the wheels to slide.

When the car is at a dead stop there is, of course, no wear on the tires; as there is no motion to produce external friction, the tire being in perfect contact with the road. If the car is started gently and slowly and nursed up to the proper speed the tire retains as nearly as possible the perfect contact with the road. Friction is held at a minimum and wear unnoticed.

How Owners Can Easily Test the Fuel Mixture

Car owners, particularly new ones, are often puzzled to know whether the mixture they are using is correct. To ascertain the correct proportions to be used, shut off the fuel at the tank and open the throttle. If the mixture that is going to the cylinders is too rich, the engine speed will increase as the level of the gasoline in the float chamber is lowered, since the operation weakens the mixture considerably. If the mixture is suspected of being too lean, the float chamber may be flooded while the engine is running and if the engine speeds up, it may be accepted as a sign that the mixture has not been rich enough.

Automobile Notes

Good brakes are twin brothers to safety. Have yours tested today.

The United States made 90 per cent of the world's production of automobiles in 1924.

No list of the things to avoid in summer is complete if it leaves out the Limited at the crossing.

FREEDOM FROM FAULT

"FREEDOM from fault," someone has said, "is no sign of greatness." It is what one does rather than what one refrains from doing that shows real character.

"You shouldn't get so angry," Deacon Alger said to Wagner. "You should control your temper as I do. Did you ever see me angry?"

"I control more temper in a day, Deacon," Wagner replied, "than you do in a year," and he was right.

The deacon was a plump, placid and self-satisfied person without a nerve in his body. Nothing excited him; he had no passions, no desires, no sudden impulses.

Poor Wagner had a devilish temper with which he struggled hourly and which most frequently he subdued. He was a highly organized bundle of energy and nerves that needed constant direction and control. Sometimes the machinery got beyond his management, and he showed some feeling and temper, but this was not often. But Wagner did things; he accomplished something; he was a real power wherever you found him. He had faults, and grievous ones, too; but the sum of his virtues and his accomplishments was overwhelmingly in excess of his faults.

Great men have often had faults, and because of their greatness these flaws in their characters have often been much exaggerated, and made to appear far out of proportion to their real significance. Webster was careless about paying his debts, but he was one of the greatest influences for good in the development of our national life that we have had.

Washington was profane, and made a close bargain, and much has been made of these facts, but he did more for the cause of higher education than any other man of his time, and more, possibly, proportionately through his own private donations than any other American excepting Mr. Rockefeller.

In spite of his faults he stands out as one of the two greatest Americans. Lincoln lacked social graces, and to the ultra-refined often seemed unpolished and crude, but his service to his country was the greatest that any man has ever performed, and throughout the world he is recognized as the greatest and noblest man which the United States has produced.

It isn't much to say of a man that he has no faults. If he is to count much in the world, he must have some honest-to-goodness virtues, and having these he can afford to have a few faults.

IF I HAD A BOY

I HAVE never had a boy of my own but I have had unusual opportunity for contact with boys from the time I was myself a youngster until the present time, and I have seen a great many boys grow up and develop and succeed—and fail. I have come to see what characteristics and qualities and training make for success and influence and happiness, and if I had a boy I should like to have him develop these qualities and receive this training.

If I had a boy I should want him to develop a strong, clean, healthy body. No matter how big or little, how slender or how husky a boy is, there is always some game or some form of physical exercise at which, if he keeps at it, he can excel and which will cultivate in him strength and reserve power and resistance to temptation and disease. If I had a boy I should want him to go into athletics.

If I had a boy I should give him advice as to the work he should follow when he became a man, but I should, so far as possible, let him choose for himself. He must live his own life; he should, therefore, choose his own business or profession. Having chosen, he should have the best training and preparation that I could afford.

I should want my boy to be clean of speech, for cleanliness of speech means clean thinking, and clean thinking strengthens character. Nothing hurts me more than to hear a boy mixing profanity and vulgar, obscene words with his talk.

I should want my boy to be a good sportsman, to do his share in any undertaking of which he was a part, to pay the penalty when he made a mistake or was defeated, without excuse and without whining.

I should want him to know how to work and to have become so much interested in some sort of work that he would like it. When I speak of work I mean not only work with the hands that brings physical weariness, but work with the brain that brings mental exhaustion. One never knows what he can do either with his body or his brain until he has been in a position where it was necessary to push each one to the limit. Too many boys whom I know are trying to devise some trick or some short cut which will make it possible for them to get out of work, either mental or physical, and these boys quite generally fail.

There are three things which every boy should strive for if he wishes to succeed—through training, a strong, clean character, and a willingness to work.

Squiblets

It is believed that coal smoke and soot in large American cities may be a cause of cancer.

The economic loss from mental disease in this country is estimated at $300,000,000 annually.

Japanese florists have succeeded in cultivating a rose which appears red in the sunlight and white in the shade.

Statistics are said to show that more money has been spent in drilling for oil than has been received from the sale of the petroleum produced.

Make Use of Airplane

It is becoming a common occurrence for mining men to use the airplane for trips between mining camps in the interior of Alaska and also in northwestern Canada. Norman L. Wilmshier, placer mining engineer of the United States Bureau of Mines, recently flew from Fairbanks, Alaska, to Eagle, an airline distance of about two hundred miles, in less than three hours, says Compressed Air Magazine.

Two modern airplanes now make regular trips out of Fairbanks—thus bringing that center within a few hours' travel of Tolovana, Kantishna, Salina, Circle City and other mining districts on the Yukon.

Shoes for Bird Dogs

As part of the equipment of bird hunters using dogs, an eastern sportsman recommends wool-lined, sole-leather boots be laced upon the four feet of the dog. "This saves many nasty briar cuts, stubble bruises and sheds sand burrs. The dog soon becomes quite willing that they should be placed upon his feet, for he realizes after his first hunt that his feet are not tender and cut up as is usual when hunting rough and weed-laden country," says this gunner.

Some men are like phonographs—they say a great deal, but never say anything original.

Neat Slogan

Some bright westerner has twisted a phrase into a slogan so pat that it has been adopted by an Oklahoma farmers' organization. The slogan is one we commend to gardeners everywhere: "Weed 'em and reap."—Boston Transcript.
